

Thursday, May 11, 2006

Genomics & Health Weekly Update

This weekly update provides information about the impact of human genetic research on disease prevention and public health.

Spotlight

CDC Announcements

Integrating the Evidence on Gene-Disease Association: Methods and applications of HuGE systematic reviews

November 6-8, 2006 ~ Cambridge, UK
Apply now. Places are limited.

At A Glance CDC's Office of Genomics and Disease Prevention
Presents an overview of public health genomics at CDC.

Genomics in the News

"Broad Institute scientists awarded $18M CARE grant"

(May 4) EurekAlert! reports, "The Broad Institute of MIT and Harvard announced today an award from the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute (NHLBI) for more than $18M to support genomic studies aimed at unveiling the genetic variations that underlie common human diseases."

Genomics in the Scientific Literature

Genes and Chronic Fatigue: How Strong Is the Evidence?

Kaiser J
Science 2006 May; 312(5774): 669 - 671

HuGE Published Literature

A common variant associated with prostate cancer in European and African populations

Amundadottir LT, et al.
Nat Genet 2006 May

Upcoming Events

8th International Meeting "Molecular Epidemiology and Evolutionary Genetics of Infectious Diseases"

November 30 - December 4, 2006 ~ Bangkok, Thailand

Let's Go Surfing

Family History and Your Health Newsletter

Michigan Department of Community Health,
May 2006